Today's Question:

Japan's Henn-na Hotel laid off more than half their staff of 243 after it emerged that they caused more problems than they solved.

Among those fired include Churi -- an assistant who couldn't perform basic functions that most of her contemporaries could, and two other luggage carriers as they could only reach 24 of the 100 available rooms, since they failed in rain or snow and would sometimes get stuck when they passed by each other.

What's unique about this hotel?
